*I*t gives me great pleasure and privilege to present to you our revamped Journal from this February 1998 issue.

Our Editorial Board met and discussed several times in the year 1997, and ultimately with very useful suggestions from my colleagues, we are now launching this new look Journal.

Rapid strides have been made in the field of Obstetrics, Gynaecology and Human Reproduction since the last four decades. Infertility, Assisted Reproductive Technologies, Reproductive endocrinology, Endoscopy, Fetomaternal medicine, Imaging Sciences, 3-D Ultrasonography system, Gynaecological Oncology, Molecular Biology, Genetics, Telmedicine, Perinatal Medicine, Geriatric Gynaecology, Adolescent Gynaecology etc. have established themselves as subspecialties or superspecialties. The present day Obstetrician and Gynaecologist has got to be abreast with this expanding knowledge.

To fulfil this need of our FOGSI members and readers, we thought it fit to give them many more additional interesting features like Guest Editorials, Guest Articles, Guest Review Articles by eminent persons. We will also try to incorporate important technical reports from eminent world organisations, and specialist Associations, Review of literature or citations from literature, Controversies in management of certain important topics, Book Reviews, letters to Editors and replies from Authors, in our forthcoming issues of our Journal. Of course, these changes cannot be done overnight, but will be implemented by and by as feasible. We will try to raise further the standard of our Journal in the coming years, and try to see that the Journal is not only helpful to family physicians, practicing Obstetrician and Gynaecologists, but also for those practicing sub and superspeciality too.

There are many advances in the printing and publishing technology over the years, and we are now trying to introduce these from our February 1998 issue onwards. These will be effected by changing the size of the Journal, elegant cover page, printing on art paper, coloured photographs and advertisements, and change of format. We hope this radical change will be more reader friendly, most up-to-date and informative.

I appeal to all my Colleagues to send their high quality scientific papers to enrich the contents of the Journal and enhance further the prestige of the Journal Nationally and Internationally.

I would certainly appreciate to receive your constructive suggestions to improve the quality of the Journal.

I Wish all the FOGSI Members and The Readers a very happy and prosperous year 1998.

Feb. 1998

Dr. Ramesh D. Pandit
Editor.
